

IBEX confirms 77 international exhibitors for 2023

A growing contingent of exhibitors and visitors from overseas, accented by the return of national pavilions, expected to give IBEX an increasingly global feel

The International BoatBuilders' Exhibition and Conference (IBEX) has long been a key trade event for boatbuilders and their first and second tier suppliers in the North American leisure marine industry. But since RAI Amsterdam acquired a 50% stake in the show in 2016, IBEX has grown increasingly important internationally, as reflected in growing numbers of exhibitors and show visitors from outside of the US and Canada.

A growing contingent of international exhibitors reflects not just strong interest in the US market, but the growing importance of globalization in the leisure marine sector, say show organisers

For 2023, IBEX will host no less than 77 international exhibitors representing 18 different countries, according to organisers, along with increasing numbers of overseas visitors. The growing interest from overseas companies is said to not only reflect strong interest in the significant US market, representing about half the world's recreational boating industry overall, but the growing importance of globalisation in the leisure marine sector.

“Our international exhibitors offer a valuable global perspective on marine product innovation and IBEX is the ideal platform to expose their products to the North American marine market,” said IBEX show director, Anne Dunbar. “The Australian and Italian Pavilions are returning, and new for 2023 we are thrilled to welcome a new French Pavilion. In addition, we will be welcoming a large trade mission from Finland consisting of professional boatbuilders, marina and yard, and other industry providers.”
